

Farming in France

The crop farming is mostly done in the north and north east. They grow apples, barley, carrots, cauliflower, corn, grapes, peas, peaches, pears, potatoes, sunflower seeds and tomatoes.

They have a lot of vineyards in the south. The vineyards are used to grow grapes which they use to make their finest wine.

A quarter of France is covered by grass land. The French rear sheep and cows. The most common animal you would see on a French farm would be the cow but they do have lots of different animals like chickens, lambs, sheep and pigs. They kill them and sell their meat for a profit. They also have dairy farms. They milk the cows and they use the milk for cheese and butter.
