

French Cuisine

In France wine, cheese and bread are very important.

A few French delicacies include frog's legs {grenouilles} and snails {escargots}. {Yum!}

Some types of French wines include Pinot Noir and Cabernet Sauvignon.

French cheeses include Camembert and Brie.

One particularly famous type of French bread is the baguette.

Brioche is a type of sweet bread and occasionally has bits of chocolate in it.

Baguette

The French eat lots of pastries, cakes and tarts.
Two of the most famous pastries are the croissant and the Pain-o-chocolat.

A bakery in French is called a Patisserie.

In France, there are special vineyards just for making wine.
The French export the best wine for everyone else in the world and keep the rest of the wine for themselves.
